Sudden Death of a Colored Man While Stealing Corn.

The late 4 shooting scrape that we have to bronicle occurred day before yesterday near a school house about five miles from DeKalb,

It appears that Prof. Hayes, who was in charge of the school, requested Thos. Squiers, one of his pupils, to perform some duty in-cumbent on him as a scholar, which Squiers peremptorily refused to do. Thereupor Prof. Hayes ordered him to leave the school which he did. Subsequently, the echool rent along quietly and nothing occurred util last Wednesday morning, when Squiers waylaid Prof. Hayes on his way to school, and without a word of warning, premeditatedly fired three shots at him, all of which entered the abdomen. Prof. Hayes was left lying in the road, while Squiers escaped and It is not known whether Prof. Hayes is dead, but it is fair to presume that he will not survive his injuries. He boarded with the father of Squiers, is a man of forty-five years of age, and is highly respected in the community, both as a man and a teacher.

Squiers is a young man of twenty years, of sighly respectable family and connections, and a nepbew of Judge Thomas Brown. Her success has been in drawing immense audiences, and hereod' was a particularly happy effort, and enlisting the greatest attention of all who came to hear from the lips of a woman who once was a helpmate of the gentle Brigham, the story of Mormon life. Whatever may be the style and beauty of the other wives o the great Mormon, the truth is, Ann Eliza No. 19 is a woman of superb lovelines; a little perhaps above the medium height, and a well-developed and voluptuous form, dark eyes and hair, a proud, maje-tic walk, and in every respect presenting the appearance of a woman, 'ast would easily captivate the heart of a Gentile, and much more easily the heart of the great Mormon giasticut longed and enthuisstic applause. We understand that Mrs. Siddons will return here next fall, after her European tour and in that event we know she will receive a warm Christian Association, delivered a lecture tion she had formerly held in the domini of Utah, and the subject of her discourse were in themselves enough to bring together the beauty and culture of Itlinois' fairest city to lit n to the words utterwedded to the Mormon faith and religion. No one more eagerly recognized the fact of success financially than the

But this, kind reader, is a dig ression. Let us come to the most absorbing interest of our story. Like other lady lecturers, No. 19 travels in company with an agent, who looks after engagements, and sees that no Young Mens' Christian Association beats her out of her hard earnings. She had the misfortune to have a gay and dash-ing fellow for her business manager. His name is Pond. He came from Wisconsin, and they call him major. A handsome man he is, arrayed in the height of fashior and conversing with a fluent and oily tongue. It was noticed soon after their arrival at the Ashley house by the different guests and Ashley house by the different guests and house servants, that there existed the greatest familiarity between the fair lecturess and her handsome agent. In the evening, after her handsome agent. In the evening, after the lecture, the audience dispersed to their homes, and the lecture party to their hotelone party imagining it to be an awful thing to be a Mormon, and the other thinking over

McNutt confesses that Sevier was the man key hanging on the rack in the office. In the morning the chambermaid and other parties connected with the house discovered that the gallant major had remained with the lovely Mormon during the night, no doubt dreaming sweet dreams of the financial success that the tale of Morman life would surely bring to those engaged in the good cause of exposing the shame and wickedness of the Shockingly Improper Incidents Congratulating Howls from the Naloon-Keepers and Free Lunch Fiends.

> The great moral epidemic which is sweep ing everything before it in the principal cities of Ohio and Indiana, threatened at one time to attack this city. The ladies of the various churches, thinking they must emulate the example of their sisters in the east, put their heads together in consultation, as to the prepriety of holding saloon prayer meetings, and after full two weeks of mental wear and tear heve wisely concluded to let the festive "whisky slingers" and trembling "beer jerkers" rest in peace. draws the line somewhere."

But looking at the reverse side of this subject, perhaps it might also be said that a long suffering community must "draw the line somewhere." Woman who have sufferare perfectly aware that he would never lend himself to such proceedings. And yet if lions annually for penal, reformatory and charitable institutions, nine-tenths of which would not be required if it were not for this traffic; all these and other interests may ask if they ought not to make a stand somewhere and somehow. But how? That is the question. There is no problem so thoroughly inwoven with the personal life, the social, business, political and governmental inter-ests of the country, so labarynthine in its nerves and fibres, as this. To the solution of this temperance problem the most sagacious earnest and courageous men have set their minds. Various have been the schemes. Moral sussion, the pledge, the Washington, ian movement, the Father Matthew society. Sons and Daughters of Temperance, Good Templars, prohibition, local option, salocon and side walk prayer meetings, all these and other plans of reform have been tried, with a greater or less degree of success. It would be exceedingly foolish to say that no advance ground has been occupied by the friends of temperance. This would be decidedla false. A public sentiment on the subject has been created which did not exist years ago. Drunkenness is no longer tol-erated in decent society. The convivial glass has vanished from the tables of our homes, dud is taken only in the saloons, the club, or other localities of quasi respectability. Even wine is to a great entent ta-booed as a society drink. Furthermore, the powerful latent temperance sentiment expowerun latent temperature action to the present Ohio upheaval. This crusade could not have been started by an innerant lecturer, unless he had found a state of feeling which by a little probing could be accounted to the wrathful storm which is now aroused to the wrathful storm which is now weeping all before it in that state. But it i not by such spasmodic movements as thi that the great work is to be effectually done. The agitation may prove absolutely beneficial. Another step may have been gained even afgress is made. The retrogressive wave sel-dom carries society back to its original stand point. But it is far better, and we think,

The atrocity of this affair exceeds that of the Bender tragedy, from the simple fact that they murdered strangers, while this job was put up on an acquaintance-the poor devil whom they sought, entired and burned to death for a little spoil. The chilling horror of this terrible crime left a stain upon our city that determined every one who had sense enough to see this aff.ir through its disguise, to help at least to ferret out the fandish crime and bring its perpetrators to that condign punishment they so richly merit. Consumption is decay. Soothing, expectorant remedies are only useful as palative; they do not reach the case—they do not stop the decay. 24. Cod Liver Oil is natures' best amistant in resisting consumption. It is at once a food, a tonic, a parifier and a healer. It braces up and supplies the vital forces, feeds the wasted system, and enables nature to regain her footbold. For these purposes nothing can compare with Cod Liver Oil. This is the theory of Wilson's Carpolated Cod Liver Oil.
